Approved For Release 2004/05/05 : CIA-RDP80M01133A000609020013-7

25 February 1975

STAIT

STAIT

MEMORANDUI	M FOR THE	RECORD
SUBJECT:	Proposal	for a Study

Yesterday [ described for General Wilson a study the Institute wishes to undertake which, in theory, would ultimately propose an international economic policy for this country. The elaboration of such a policy would obviously be most ambitious but, even so, it would be only a part, although perhaps the central part, of the project, for the study would also relate this policy to the strategic concerns that attend our relations with the Soviet Union. Furthermore, it would, in ways that did not make altogether clear, serve the interests of some of the Institute's industrial clients, perhaps in part by addressing certain unspecified "structural problems" that afflict relations between the federal government and business and perhaps by assisting these firms, at least indirectly, in decisions about where and how much to invest. These clients would also, in some fashion, contribute to this "public-private" study.

2. The plan seemed to me confused and grandiose. Perhaps a more detailed description will dispel the former impression; the latter will, I suspect, persist. To weigh judiciously the innumerable considerations that together make up even a small portion of our "international economic policy" is a monumentally difficult undertaking; and the results, because competing interests inevitably collide, is never completely satisfactory. But an attempt to draw up a general policy, outside of the bargaining of politics, runs, I think, a great risk of irrevelance and superficiality. In any event, it is not clear why the intelligence community, rather than Treasury or the State Department, should support such a study.

The proposal had, I thought, still more serious vulnerabilities. Not only was it not obvious how the intelligence community would benefit from the project, but the study, at least as it was described at the meeting, threatened to involve the community in what might easily be construed as unethical relationships with certain business firms. The would be--or, almost as bad, would appear to be-the privileged beneficiaries of information from the intelligence community. Even if that were carefully prevented, those firms alone--at least initially--would enjoy the fruits of a project partially financed by the Intelligence Community Staff.

STAT

STAT

Approved For Release 2004/05/05 : CIA-RDR80M011173A000600020013-7

FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY Approved For Release 2004/05/05 : CIA-RDP80M01133A000600020013-7

4. The proposed study seems, th not necessarily helpful to the intell the risk of potentially embarrassing skeptically examining a more detailed much in order.	igence community, associations. Our	thoroughly and

Distribution:

Original - General Wilson
IC Registry
PRD Subject
PRD Chrono

1 - SRS Chrono

STAT

STAT